GOOD NIGHT FOR RAIDS.

Joint Wiped Out.

Yesterday was a festive Sunday with the police of the Second precinct, and the result of the work of the day was the wiping out of three unicensed bars and the raiding of a gambling joint.

For some time Policemen Barnes and Cochran have kept their eyes open for the house of Mary Johnson, colored, in Covington street. There were two reasons for this. It was known that she was selling this. It was known that sie was seming liquor without a liceuse, and it was certain that Eli Brown, colored, was conducting a gaming table there. The difficulty was in getting the testimony necessary to make out a case against them.

make out a case against them.
Yesterday afternoon Policeman Barnes and Cochran, chosing their time well, visited the place. Barnes entered by the front door, while Cochran took care of the rear. As they entered there was great confusion. The lower rooms were well filled with players. The place was also pregnant with the fumes of liquor, with the scent of gin the most prominent. The players at the table grabbed their coin and threw away their cards and dice, but these were secured by the officers as testi-mony. The men and women made a realony. The men and women made a rust for the upper rooms, through which they climbed to the roof, and rushing across the roofs of the adjoining houses sought to escape. Some of them did, but enough men and women were taken in this raid to fill two patrol wagons. Several cases of beer and a number of bottles of gin and whisky and a number of bottles of gin and whisky were also taken by the police.

The house of Nathan Brown in Freeman's alley was invaded into yesterday after-noon by Policemen Corson and Aubirdge and Brown was taken to the station on the charge of keeping an unlicensed bar. It is thought that the necessary evidence was secured in the form of strong drink to convict, and several winesses were captured in the place.

Ellen Douglas, colored, was arrested yesterday by Policeman May at her home in Freedman Salley on the charge of conducting

BOP TO THE PUBLIC

The Ingenuity of the supporters of the bill including both items, commonly known as the bord bill, or the highway act, made it appear that to establish the best sewerage system it was necessary to include the moorros, and that to include the subarts it was necessary to extend the streets. This was argued successfully before the committee of the liouse and the bill passed that body. It then went to the Senate, where the same arguments were used. There was, however, opposition which developed itself strongly in the last days of the season, but notwithstanding which, the Senate adopted the House report with mim-BOP TO THE PUBLIC of the day in the session when the bill

The highway act was framed so hastily,

The questions asked were.

First—Do you favor the issuance of bonds
by the District to the amount of four million dollars for the improvement of sewers and streets within the city limits proper?

Second-Do you favor the Issuance by the District of bonds to the amount of seven million five hundred thousand dollars, or improvements which shall include pro-lying outside of the city limits proper

RESULT OF THE VOTE. 6,657

Total opinions expressed.. 19,698 ANALYSIS OF THE VOTE.

The figures demonstrate some interesting facts. It will be seen that nearly one-third more voters favor improvements inside the city than favor improvements outside the city.

It will also be seen that the anti-real estate ring voters (those favoring improvements inside the city and those against any bond bill) are about one-third more than those favoring the ring, namely those in favor of improvements outside the city and favor of improvements outside the city and those in favor of both. It is a source of gratifaction to The Times

It was by his own hand that Thomas J Dunn, whose body was found in his room at No. 620 O street northwest, as stated in The Times of yesterday, came to his death When the friends and police entered the eath chamber there was a whisky bottle near the dead man's couch, and as he wa known in life to have been a hard drinker the conclusion was hastily reached that it was another case of alcoholism, but when Undertaker Wright, into whose custody 'oroner Hammett ordered the remains delivered, came to make a search among the papers which covered the chair and little table near the the head of the bed he found several packages of ordinary letter paper carefully written in pencil, folded without much reference to symmetry and directed "To the Coroner or the Proper Authori-

Still the officials who seized upon the case as alcoholism' the moment they looked into the face of the corpss were not far wrong, for although drink was not the immediate, it was the indirect cause of death. The letter, written in a firm hand, was as
